Glassboro School Employees Offered Healthcare Support

Glassboro –The Glassboro Board of Education is pleased to announce the addition of a new healthcare benefit that will provide school district employees and their families with expert help and support regarding health and insurance concerns.

Dalton Insurance Agency, L.L.C., working in conjunction with David Kalapos of Integrated Financial Strategies, Inc., is offering the free “Health Advocate” benefit to help Glassboro employees navigate the complexities of today’s healthcare system. Eligible employees will have unlimited access to Health Advocate’s trained staff, including registered nurses, supported by a team of administrative experts and medical directors. The new benefit will provide assistance in helping to arrange appointments with specialist physicians and medical institutions, coordinate complex clinical issues, access community resources, find senior care services that fall outside the traditional health insurance coverage, and solve administrative matters. The service extends to school district employee’s spouses, dependent children, parents and parents-in-law.

“We are committed to providing our employees with the support they need to attend to their families’ healthcare needs,” stated Glassboro Superintendent Dr. Michael Gorman. “The services Health Advocate offers will free our employees from the burden of trying to resolve the vexing and often complicated issues many routinely encounter when using the healthcare system,” he said.

“With health insurance regulations and the increasing cost of healthcare, Health Advocate provides services that will help our employees confidently and confidentially find their way through the healthcare system, saving them and the district time and money,” added George Leone, Assistant Superintendent and Board Secretary for the school district.
