

Health Advocate, Inc. Honors Local Police Departments

Police Officers served as chocolate chip baking contest judges

They keep us safe and are there to protect us when “the chips are down.” On May 20, Health Advocate, Inc. hosted local police officers for their third annual Chocolate Chip Baking Contest, a celebration of National Police Week and National Chocolate Chip Day. The contest is the company’s way of honoring local police departments, including Plymouth, Whitmarsh, and Whitpain Townships, as well as the Montgomery County Sheriff’s Department. Officers from each department acted as “celebrity” judges for the contest, and afterwards were able to take the leftover treats back to their departments to share with their fellow officers. Health Advocate also made a donation to the four police departments in honor of their respective officers.

As judges, the officers helped to choose the winners and at the same time served as a representative for their respective Police Departments. They also had a meet and greet with the employees, many of whom live in and around Plymouth Meeting, answer questions, and talk about police events.

“We appreciate the support of organizations like Health Advocate as we try to keep our community a great place to live,” says Officer Mike Capperella of the Plymouth Township Police Department. “In addition to showing appreciation of law enforcement, events like this one give people an opportunity to learn about what we do for our community, and what they can do to help keep it safe.”

Health Advocate, Inc. makes a donation to each of the Whitpain Police Department as a token of appreciation in honor of National Police Week on May 20.

This marked the third straight year that Health Advocate hosted the police-judged contest. The event was the perfect way to celebrate National Police Week (May 15-21) and National Chocolate Chip Day (May 15) concurrently.

“This year’s event was a total success and we look forward to making it even better next year,” says Marty Rosen, Chief Marketing Officer, Executive Vice President and cofounder of Health Advocate. “This is our way of saying thanks to the very people who keep us safe every day. As an added bonus, our employees were able to ask questions and learn how they can get involved in ensuring the safety of their own communities.”
